Valančienė v. Lithuania (application no. 2657/10)

The applicant, Adelė Valančienė, is a Lithuanian national who was born in 1940 and lives in Plungė (Lithuania). She complains that the State violated her right to the protection of property under Article 1 of Protocol No. 1 to the European Convention on Human Rights. In the early 1990s the authorities started taking actions to restore the property rights of Ms Valančienė's late husband to a plot of land that had been nationalised in 1940. The authorities ruled that the same land could not be returned, but offered the transfer of a new plot or monetary compensation. Ms Valančienė's husband and (after his death in 2005) Ms Valančienė herself requested that the same plot of land be restored, or that they receive a plot of equivalent value. They repeatedly refused the authorities' offers of a transfer of another plot, on the grounds that the plots offered to them in exchange were not in fact of an equivalent value. Eventually in 2007 the local District Land Service found that Ms Valančienė had refused to indicate a preferred form of restitution, and decided to restore her property rights by making a payment of monetary compensation. She challenged this decision in court, but she was unsuccessful. She complains that the State had violated her property rights by refusing to restore to her the same plot of land or give her a plot of truly equivalent value, and that the amount of compensation she was granted was too low. She also complains of the overall length of the proceedings, highlighting the fact that she was not paid the compensation until 2016.

Thursday 20 April 2017
